... You may not happen to know--

That for several years the Academy has been quietly building up a Library about motion pictures until we now have the second or third best collection in the country.

The original intention was purely cultural. We felt that in Hollywood somebody should take a serious and intelligent interest in preserving for future years the fascinating record of the growth and development of our industry.

However, the Library has become of great practical use also. It is not only used by authors collecting data for books and magazine articles, but the studios are constantly calling for casts of old pictures, dates of important events, information on silent pictures considered for remakes, etc.

During the past year the studios have been sending to the Academy the literally hundreds of letters they receive which the fan mail and publicity departments are unable to answer properly. Schools all over the country are now studying motion pictures — from Chicago to villages in the Colorado mountains. These classes are moulding the future motion picture public. Times change — these aren't the "fan letters" of the old days. It takes a real Library, a university-trained and picture-experienced staff to handle this particular phase of the motion picture industry's relations to the public. As motion pictures reach artistic and intellectual maturity, activities such as the Library of the Academy become increasingly appropriate and deserving of support.

DONALD GLEDHILL,
Executive Secretary.
